Fighting Thalassemia Together

Anwar

Aman is today 14 years old a special child to his parents full of style and life. What makes Aman special, that is his extra ordinary talent and the ability to stand different from many children of his age. He was just 6 months old when his parents realized that their son is thalassemia major.

It all began when their parents married in close relation. Aman has a sister Shaesta 19 years old she is normal. Aman is now gone to be with his mother in US . His dreams are about to take wings.

When Dr Raman disclosed that Aman is a Thalassemia patient and he would require blood for life, hearing this Anwar father of Aman lost hope towards life and contemplated committing suicide by jumping in the lake Tanbund. However his wife Nasreen a very courageous lady took control of the situation and turned the negative to the positive As a daily hawker Anwar would sell caps and belts by the road side earning 200 Rs per day to manage the transfusion and iron chelating drugs. He has stood on roads selling articles for 27 years now.

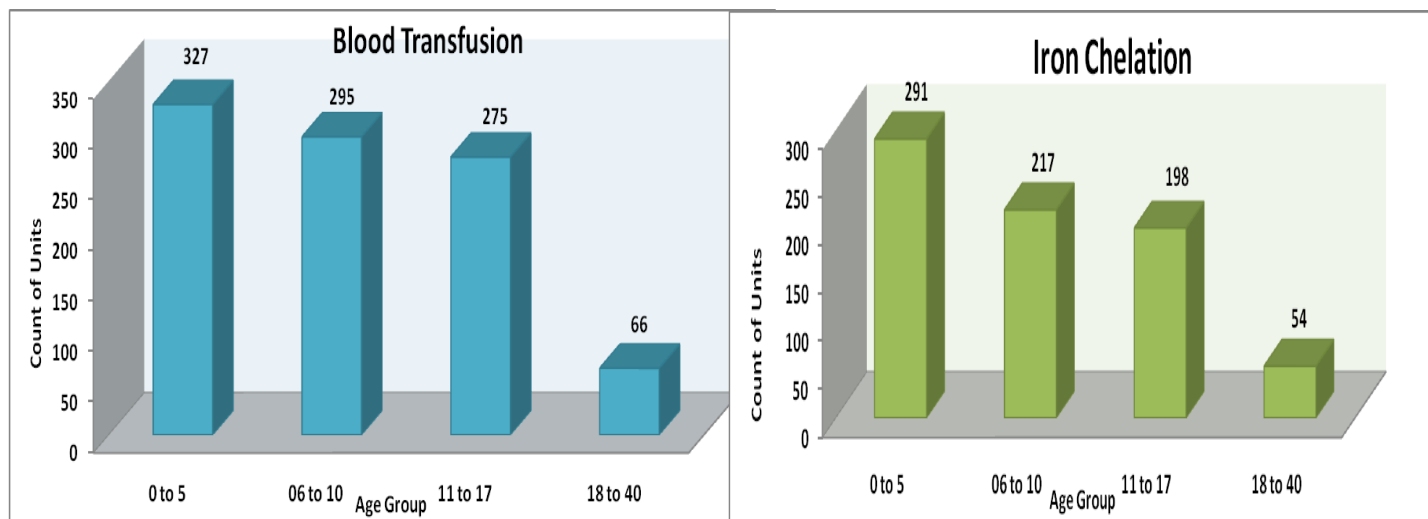

Aman wants to become an engineer. He has completed his 8th Std and will be joining a school in Philadelphia where his mother left few years back to work in a beauty saloon. Life has taken a turn when Nasreen did not give up to the circumstances, but fought courageously.

There are other hidden talents Aman has he is very good at arts, skating and drawing. His friends are very supportive they call him CHAMP

During there downtime the family was supported by an unknown donor from TSCS for 3 years continuously towards the medicine cost. Anwar had been coming for his treatment for almost 8 years. They feel very good in the society and they have praises for the nurses' and the doctors here.

A Self Sketch made by Aman

"I want to let everyone know that, even though the illness is not curable that easily, it is treatable,". "I want to encourage parents that it's not the end of the world if you have a child with thalassemia. Give them transfusion also provide them with Iron Chelation drugs. Your child will have a wonderful life and future if they get the proper care – and the future is getting brighter by the day."
